The SUPERGROUP includes keyboardist Chuck Leavell and saxophonist Tim Ries of The Rolling Stones, drummer Simon Kirke of Bad Company, drummer Chad Smith of The Red Hot Chili Peppers, bassist John Conte of Crown Jewels, guitarist Ricky Byrd, formerly of Joan Jett and The Blackhearts, guitarist Barry Goudreau, formerly of Boston, guitarist Marc Orrell, formerly of The Dropkick Murphys, and guitarist and vocalist Kate Taylor. Ernie and The Automatics will open the show and there will be surprise guests making an appearance to show their support for Right Turn.

"These are world class musicians coming together to raise money for addiction treatment – it is going to be a fantastic show" said Woody Giessmann, addiction specialist and founder and CEO of the Arlington-based Right Turn. "Right Turn fills a need in our community for recovery programs that target artists and entertainers. Our program is unique because we can reach out to creative people and give them individual support."

Members of the SUPERGROUP will perform together at this concert to support a cause close to their hearts. Drummer Simon Kirke lost friend and Free band mate Paul Kossoff to drug induced heart failure in 1976. Drummer Chad Smith joined the Red Hot Chili Peppers in the wake of former member Hillel Slovak's drug overdose in 1988, and observed band mate Anthony Kiedis' battle with addiction throughout their careers together.
